MORTLAKE- RICH IN GEOLOGICAL HISTORY JUST WAITING TO BE UNCOVERED

Sitting at the bottom of Mount Shadwell, one of Victoria's most recently active volcanoes, Mortlake is rich in both natural and early settler history. Amongst the Volcanic Lakes and Plains, just a 2.5hrs drive from Melbourne, experience the geological wonders of Mortlake and region.

Formed 25,000 years ago, Mount Shadwell is believed to have last erupted 5,000 years ago, making it one of the most recently active volcanoes to erupt within the Volcanic Lakes and Plains region. Large volcanic rocks were ejected from Mount Shadwell during the eruption and cooled whilst falling to the ground. These 'volcanic bombs' contained olivine, which is a very common silicate mineral that occurs mostly in dark coloured igneous rocks. The town has an absolute surplus of it, and has been named 'Australia's Olivine Capital'.

Discover the rich history of Mortlake. Take a walk down the main street and immerse yourself in the heritage of the period bluestone buildings and shopfronts. Explore the quirks of the locals and their treasures - from whimsical second hand stores to award-winning artisan charcuterie products. With fertile volcanic plains, Mortlake has long appealed to farmers and specialist producers, creating an admirable range of local products for discovery. Throughout the year, community markets are held showcasing local art and produce.
